For the Rapid men and women, and not a few older men and women, among the so called "educated classes," who have never read the Bible, and whose knowledge of it is obtained mainly, if not altogether, from hearsay. They may, if the children of religious parents, have learned something about it in Sunday school and from sermons, but that is all; they have not read enough of it to have any plear idea of its contents, much less to appreciate them at their true value, or even to fully understand allusions to them. If this rather startling statement is doubted let the doubter test it by asking two or three Biblical questions in the next miscellaneous company he meets, be the members old or young—and see the answers hegets. Unless more fortunate than some others who have tried the same experiment, he will be—to put it mildly—astonished. That the Bible is read the same experiment, he will be-to put it mildly-astonished. That the Bible is read more than any other book may be freely admitted; but the point we urge is-and facts will sustain us-that it is not read as generally as it ought to be, not nearly as much as is commonly supposed; and that there are hundreds, if not thousands, in every large community, of what are considered intelli-gent persons, to whom—for all the personal acquaintance they have with them by read-ing—the Old and New Testaments might just as well have remained in their original History and Greek. Let us suppose that dur-ing the process of translation and publica-tion extracts from the more important por-tions had been given to the public through the daily press or in pamphlet. men through darkness up to the light thatis "This collection of books has taken such a hold upon the world as no other. The literature of Greece, which goes up like indeeds, has not half the influence of this book from a nation alike despised in ancient and modern times. It is read of a Sunday in all the thirty thousand pulpits in our land. In all the temples of Christendom is its voice lifted up week by week. The son never sets upon its gleaming page. It goes equally to the cottage of the plain man and the palace of the king. It is woven into the literature of the scholar, and colors the talk of the street. The bark of the merchant can-not sail the sea without it; no ship of war goes to the conflict without the Bible is there, It enters men's closets; mingles in all the grief and cheerfulness of life. The affianced maiden prays God in Scripture for strength in her new duties; men are married by Scripture. The Bible attends them in their sickness; when the fever of the world is on them the aching head finds a softer pillow if such leaves lie underneath. The mariner, escaping from shipwreck, clutches this first of his treasures, and keeps it sacred to God.
It goes with the peddler in his crowded pact; cheers him at eventide, when he sits down dusty and fatigued; brightens the freshness of his morning face. It blesses us when we are born; gives names to half Christendom; rejoices with us; has sympathy for our mourning; tempers our grief to finer issues. It is the better part of our sermons. It lifts man above himself; our best of uttered prayers are in its storied speech A PRIVATE HOME for the treatment of DIS-EASES OF WOMEN. Located in one of the most desirable parts of the city.
